He/she would carry out the research on the growth of thin films and structures based on strongly correlated materials using pulsed laser deposition system, and on studies of various electronic phases which appear in these devices, such as superconducting, magnetic or topological phases, and phase transitions between them, induced by the change of chemical composition, dimensionality, or various external parameters (temperature, magnetic field, etc.). It is expected that he/she will engage in the development of experimental apparatus and new experimental methods. It is also required that he/she will actively search for external funding of research activities.

The candidate should have experience in conducting research in the field of experimental condensed matter physics, documented by publications. Some experience in organizational activities in science would be welcome (such as PI in a small grant for performing specific experiment, for example, Miniatura grant).
